An Excellent Combination.

The pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO., illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative, cleansing the system effectually, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers gently yet promptly and enabling one to overcome habitual constipation permanently. Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal qualities of the remedy are obtained from senna and other aromatic plants, by a method known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only. Notice of Business Change.

The old saying that "the unlooked-for always happens" may be true in the present instance. The Sonoma News is no more! Having sold the paper and its good will to Mr. Granice, the business and subscription books pass into his hands. Those who are in arrears for their paper will please pay Mr. Granice and those who have paid in advance will receive the INDEX-TRIBUNE to full extent of their subscriptions.

There are three reasons I might give for making this change. It is well known that I did not buy the News with the intention of running it myself. A person usually sells a commercial commodity when the price asked is accepted. The third reason is the more potent one—our patronizing territory is too limited to properly support two weekly newspapers.

But we do need and must have for the weal of the commonwealth one good, wide-awake paper, which shall be alive to the best interests of our people, and such a paper Mr. Granice will be able to furnish us providing he has the good will and support his paper merits. So we sincerely hope all our subscribers and patrons will lend a hand.

With a thank you to our friends and wishes for the success of the INDEX-TRIBUNE we break our quill.

Women Should Know It.

Many women suffer untold agony and misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood. They have been led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is reponsible for the many ills that beset womankind.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it with scalding or burning sensation, sediment in it after standing in a bottle or common glass for twenty-four hours, are signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

The above symptoms are often attributed by the patient herself or by her physician to female weakness or womb trouble. Hence, so many fail to obtain relief, because they are treating, not the disease itself, but a reflection of the primary cause, which is kidney trouble.

In fact, women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble and both need the same remedy.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is the great discovery of the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is easy to get at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar.

To prove its wonderful merits you may have a sample bottle and book telling all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Kindly mention the SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co. Binghamton, N. Y.

WHEN I WAS A BOY.

Up in the attic where I slept
When I was a boy, a little boy,
In through the lattice the moonlight crept,
Bringing a tide of dreams that swept
Down, low, red trundle bed,
Bathing the tangled curly head,
While the moonbeams played at hide and seek
With the dimples on the sun browned cheek—
When I was a boy, a little boy!

And, oh, the dreams—the dreams I dreamed
When I was a boy, a little boy!
For the grace that through the lattice streamed
Over my folded eyelids seemed
To have the gift of prophecy
And to bring the glimpses of time to be
When manhood's clarion seemed to call—
Ah, that was the sweetest dream of all
When I was a boy, a little boy!

I'd like to sleep where I used to sleep
When I was a boy, a little boy!
For in at the lattice the moon would peep,
Bringing her tide of dreams to sweep
The cares and griefs of the years away
From the heart that is weary and faint today,
And those dreams should give me back again
A peace I have never known since then—
When I was a boy, a little boy!

—Eugene Field.

THE GRAVE'S ODOR.

We were lolling in a couple of easy chairs on the veranda one evening after dinner, Stanfield and I, when my friend sent the glowing stump of his cheroot pirouetting down the steps, and, turning in his chair, said abruptly:

"Do you know, Dick, a man was shot once just where you're sitting?"

Naturally I was startled, and, instead of replying to Stanfield's remark, glanced uneasily down the long, ghostly veranda, of which the outer edge lay in bright moonlight, while the inner portion was wrapped in the dense shadow of the partly drawn bamboo jalousies.

"I know the feeling," said Stanfield, noting my uneasiness. "I never sit here of an evening without getting a creepy sensation all over me. The servants say the old bungalow is haunted, and I shouldn't wonder if they are right. Anyhow, if it isn't, it ought to be, for the story connected with it is an uncanny one altogether. See that hole in the jalousies there on your right?"

"Do you mean that oblong slit just above the balustrade? 'Pon my word, against the moonlight, it looks for all the world like a malignant eye!"

"So it is," said Stanfield, with a slight shiver. "It was through that hole Judge Robertson, my predecessor, was shot."

"Ah, I've heard there was a strange story connected with his death, but I know none of the particulars. Suppose you light another weed and talk me out of this creepy fit."

"Talk you into a worse one, more like," retorted Stanfield, striking a fusee. "I'll wager you never heard a weirder story. But you shall have the facts and then judge for yourself."

With that he settled himself in his chair, and after puffing reflectively at his cheroot for some seconds went on to tell me the story of the shot through the jalousies:

"Robertson, you must know, was an Eton boy, like myself. We were chums, in fact, in the old days, and that is how I came to know of a peculiar tradition, if I may so name it, that is said to have been in his family for centuries.

"I don't know whether you believe in death warnings, Dick, but it seems that for hundreds of years no Robertson has ever died without first having a distinct premonition of his approaching end, and, what is more remarkable still, the warning always comes in the form of an odor, an earthy smell—the smell of a new dug grave.

"Well, about a week before his death, when he was on his way to take up his appointment here, in fact, Robertson passed through Malariabad, where I was at that time stationed as collector, and of course I put him up for the night. After dinner we were sitting smoking, just as you and I are now, when presently he says:

"'Stanfield,' says he, 'there's a devilish queer smell about. Been having any digging done on the premises?'

"'No,' said I, 'I haven't, and for the life of me I can't smell anything except these Dindigul's we're smoking.'

"'Perhaps that's what it is, then,' said he doubtfully, and for half an hour or so the subject was dropped.

"Just as we were making a move for bed, however, he suddenly grips my hand, and, 'Stanfield,' says he hoarsely, 'for God's sake tell me that your people have been digging somewhere near or that there's been a shower. I can't get that earthy smell out of my nostrils. It's like standing over a new made grave.'

"Just a week later, to a day, I was at work in my office one morning when a peon brought in a telegram. Dick, that telegram brought the news that Robertson had been shot dead by his own butler at 8 o'clock the evening before!"

"By his own butler!" I exclaimed horrified; for while Stanfield was relating this tragic tale I had heard the voice of his butler giving orders to the table boys in the dining room at our back.

"Yes, by his own butler," resumed Stanfield, "and on the very spot where you sit. Indeed," consulting his watch, "it happened just at this time, for it's now 8 o'clock to the minute."

"But," I cried, glancing apprehensively at the eyelike aperture in the jalousies, "why by his butler? For heaven's sake, explain!"

"I will," continued Stanfield, "but first I must hark back a bit and tell you that the telegram ordered me to proceed at once to this station as Robertson's successor. Well, I did so, and almost my first duty as a judge was to try the poor fellow's murderer."

"The butler?"

"The butler, and that brings me to the explanation you asked for a moment ago. Robertson, it appears, had had a case before him in which a native was charged with maltreating his wife, a mere child barely 12 years of age, in such a brutal manner as to cause her death. Cases of that kind are far from being uncommon, as you know, and Robertson—well, he did what almost any other English judge would have done under the circumstances—gave the scamp his deserts and sentenced him to death.

"Now this occurred only a few hours before he was murdered, and you will at once suspect some hidden connection between the two events. And you are right. In passing sentence of death upon the brutal native he virtually passed sentence upon himself.

"Robertson had in his service at the time, among other servants, a butler who was related to the man he had just condemned. Whether he was aware of the exact relationship existing between the two I don't know, but I am inclined to think not. As a matter of fact, when Robertson sat down to dinner that night, after sentencing the native to death, he was waited upon by the convict's own brother.

"You observed a rifle on the dining room wall, I have no doubt, just opposite your place at table. It was from that rifle the fatal shot was fired.

"Not while Robertson was at dinner, though. The butler was too wily for that. He bided his time until his master had seated himself in his usual place here on the veranda, taken his coffee and smoked his cheroot. Then, when these had begun to make him drowsy, the fellow took the rifle from the wall—it was always kept loaded—and crept through the bedrooms to the far end of the veranda, where, as you see, the shadow lies so deep.

"Sitting as we are now, you observe that the steps between the far end of the veranda and the jalousies with the hole in it are concealed by the row of pillars, and you will readily understand how a barefooted native might creep along those steps under cover of the pillars and apply his eye to the hole without being either seen or heard. Well, that is just what the butler did. Only he did something more.

"After applying his eye to the hole he noiselessly inserted the muzzle of the rifle in the aperture, took deliberate aim at his master's heart and fired. Poor Robertson! He never knew what hurt him."

Stanfield ceased speaking, and a painful silence fell upon us both. The movement of a lizard in the jalousies through which the shot had been fired sent a thrill of horror through my nerves. I fancied I could hear the butler's stealthy footsteps and see the gleam of the rifle barrel in the moonlight. So awfully real was my conception of the whole scene that at last, in sheer desperation, I spoke and so broke the spell.

"Hadn't Robertson a wife? I have an idea that I once met her in Madras."

"He had, and speaking of her reminds me that my story is still unfinished. In fact, the most remarkable part of it is yet to come.

"About a year before her husband's death Mrs. Robertson, it seems, went home to England for her health, and when I last saw Robertson alive—the night he had the strange premonition, you remember—he was daily expecting her back. Well, it is a singular coincidence, but perfectly true, that the steamer she was a passenger by entered Bombay harbor on the very evening and at the very hour when Robertson was shot.

"Mrs. Robertson had gathered all her traps together, intending to disembark that night, and as soon as she heard the anchor dropped she left the cabin to go on deck. In her hand she carried a small traveling clock, and just as she reached the foot of the companion stairs she glanced at it and saw that the hour was exactly 8 o'clock. At the same moment an indescribable terror seized her. She looked up quickly, and there on the steps above her stood her husband.

She sprang up the steps to meet him, but he suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. At the top of the steps she ran against the purser.

"'There's no hurry, madam,' said he, 'the tender's not alongside yet.'

"'But my husband!' cried Mrs. R. 'I saw him here just now. How did he come aboard?'

"'Madam,' replied the purser, 'you must be mistaken. Not a living soul has boarded the ship tonight.'

"And he was right, for if Mrs. R. saw anything, as she declares she did, it must have been the spirit of her dying husband."

"Let us go in," said I, rising hastily. "This night air has given me a chill."

The White Man In the Tropics.

The attempt to acclimatize the white man in the tropics must be recognized to be a blunder of the first magnitude. All experiments based upon the idea are mere idle and empty enterprises foredoomed to failure. Excepting only the deportation of the African races under the situation of slavery, probably no other idea which has held the mind of our civilization during the last 300 years has led to so much physical and moral suffering and degradation or has strewn the world with the wrecks of so many gigantic enterprises. In the tropics a white man lives and works only as a diver lives and works under water. Alike in a moral, in an ethical and in a political sense, the atmosphere he breathes must be that of another region, that which produced him, and to which he belongs. Neither physically, morally, nor politically can he be acclimatized in the tropics.—Benjamin S. Kidd.

Decorated by Christina.

"In the suburbs of Sedalia, Mo.," says the Kansas City Times, "there lives a scholarly gentleman who was awarded the Order of Christina by the Queen of Spain for his zealous care of her two grandsons, Raymondo Guell y Barbon and Fernando Alfonso, who afterward became the King of Spain, and was the father of little Alfonso, the present king. This gentleman is Colonel Van B. Wisker, whom nearly all Missourians with a state acquaintance know."

The Money Cost of War.

A calculation as careful as is possible places the total cost of war during the last 3,000 years at the appalling sum of £120,000,000,000. If it were possible to pay this enormous bill in gold, we should require 942,857 tons of sovereigns and an army of over 600,000 horses to draw it.

If it had been possible for all the nints now existing throughout the world to begin coining sovereigns at their present rate in the year of Christ's birth, they would still have to continue for 879 years more before their task would be completed.

If these sovereigns could be reared into one sky piercing column as a memorial to those whose blood they bought, the column would stand on a base of 100 square feet and would rise into the clouds nearly 4,000 feet higher than the summit of Mont Blanc. They would equally pave with sovereigns a road 73 feet wide, stretching from Charing Cross to over 100 miles beyond Constantinople.

And this is the appalling price which men have paid in gold and blood for the privilege of killing each other.—London Standard.

Mutually Unpleasant.

Many are the trials encountered by the unfortunate man who, in time of domestic turmoil, is forced to visit an intelligence office.

"My dear," said Mr. Roberts, his youthful face flushed with heat and symptoms of irritation in his voice, "I really should prefer to do the cooking myself rather than go to that intelligence office again.

"Have I secured a cook?" he went on. "No, I have not, Mrs. Roberts. I escaped from one dreadful creature, who even asked me whether our house was 'owned free or mortgaged.' And as I turned from her I saw a respectable looking woman who had just entered the room. She looked comparatively pleasant. So I stepped up to her and asked meekly:

"'Can you fill the position of cook in a family of four?'

"She looked at me as if she'd like to wither me with one blighting glance and said haughtily: 'I am trying to fill that of coachman in a family of two. I think you would do if you have proper recommendations.'"—Youth's Companion.

He Obeyed Instructions.

The Club Woman tells an amusing story of a party of women who recently visited Pike's peak. A youth, still in knee breeches, although he wore a collar of extraordinary height and stiffness, was their guide, but his knowledge of the points of interest appeared to be slight.

Every few minutes he stood up and shouted the names of certain bowlders and streams. When we were nearly at the top, he called out:

"On the right is the Lion's Mouth!"

"Why is it called the Lion's Mouth?" asked a skeptical lady who had pestered him with "whys" all the way.

"Aw, I dunno," said the lad, tired of being asked for information. "I was told to holler these names. I dunno why nothin. It's my job to holler, and so I holler."

Bernhardt and Loti.

Sarah Bernhardt recently said to a persistent newspaper correspondent: "I have told you everything. There is nothing that remains for me to say. You are as bad as Pierre Loti!"

"What on earth has Pierre Loti done to you?" was the answer.

"Oh, simply that once upon a time he made up his mind that he was going to make my acquaintance. First he wrote me a letter expressing his admiration for me, and did me the honor of dedicating a book to me. I thanked him, but I did not invite him to call on me."

"We hand folks over to God's mercy and show none ourselves.—George Eliot.

Every woman should know that there is a great home medical book that tells all about the reproductive physiology of women, and all about the home-treatment of diseases peculiar to the sex. This book contains 1008 pages and over 700 illustrations. It is called Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It used to cost $1.50. Over seven hundred thousand people purchased it at that price and over 1,200,000 people now own copies of it. For a limited time copies will be given away free.

This great book contains the names, addresses, photographs and experiences of hundreds of women who were once hopeless invalids, but who have been restored to robust womanly health by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This marvelous medicine acts directly on the delicate organs distinctly feminine. It makes them strong, healthy, vigorous, virile and elastic. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It banishes the usual suffering of the expectant months, and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It robs motherhood of its perils. It insures the robust health of the little new-comer and a bountiful supply of nature's nourishment. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into healthy, happy wives and mothers. Miss Edith Cain, of Clinton, Allegheny Co., Pa., writes: "After two years of suffering, I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and am now entirely cured. I had been troubled with female weakness for some time and also with a troublesome drain on the system, but now I am happy and well."

In cases of constipation and torpid liver, no remedy is equal to Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate and invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. They never fail. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe. An honest dealer will not urge a substitute upon you.

SONOMA, MARCH 11, 1899.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

THE proposition to move the Odd Fellows Home at Thermalito to a more desirable location will come up for consideration before the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, which convenes in San Francisco on the second Tuesday in May. That the Home will be transferred does not admit of a doubt as a great deal of dissatisfaction exists over the present location which is, to say the least, a very undesirable one in so far as health and climate are concerned.

A number of local lodges in various parts of the State backed up by their respective communities are already actively at work to secure the Home, which will prove a valuable business accession to any community.

Sonoma Lodge, No. 28, which is one of the oldest lodges in California, will appoint a committee of influential Odd Fellows to present the claims of this place for the site and will endeavor to have the Home located here, which in so far as climate and local conditions are concerned surpasses those of any other section of California. These essentials with the requisite amount of energy thrown in by the people of both town and valley, all of whom will reap a corresponding benefit by the location of such an institution in our midst, ought to secure Sonoma the location. This being so it behooves the citizens of this town to be up and doing and endeavor in every way possible to assist our local lodge of Odd Fellows in their efforts to bring the Home here, even though we offer it a handsome and desirable site free of charge in addition to those gifts of nature which have been so lavishly bestowed upon this valley—a healthly climate, an abundance of pure cool sparkling water and scenery unsurpassed for beauty and grandeur.

"MADAM," said Condutor Hunter as he punched the ticket of a Santa Rosa lady coming from the city, "I am very sorry, but you can't have your dog in this car. It's against the rules." "I shall hold him in my lap all the way sir," she replied, "and he will not disturb anyone." "That makes no difference," said Hunter, "I couldn't allow my own dog here. I'll fasten him all right for you—" "Don't you touch my dog, sir," exclaimed the young woman excitedly, "I will trust him to no one." And with indignant tread she marched to the baggage car, tied her dog and returned. As the train was approaching Santa Rosa and the conductor came along, she asked him, "Will you tell me if my dog is all right?" "I am very sorry," said the conductor, politely, "but you tied him to a trunk, and he was thrown off with it at Petaluma."—Guerneville X-Rays.

LAST Wednesday morning between three and five o'clock the thermometer dropped 36 degrees above zero and there was a slight frost in many of the low places in the valley. Shortly before sunrise, however, the thermometer began to rise and in an hour or two the sky became cloudy and prevented any serious injury to fruit by the unwelcome visitor. So far the fruit outlook is very promising in this section and all that our orchardists now dread is frosty weather. Should they be spared this the fruit yield in Sonoma Valley will be simply immense this season.

THE people of this town should all pull together and endeavor to secure the Odd Fellows Home, which now occupies leased premises at Thermalito, Butte county, and which will shortly be transferred to a more desirable and healthy location. A meeting should be called and a Committee of Ways and Means appointed to induce the Odd Fellows to locate the Home in or near Sonoma. We feel confident that if our people will get in and make an effort to secure the Home that they will succeed, as there is no more desirable place in California for such an institution. Time is short and if a move is to be made in that direction let it be made at once.

Nine inquests were held last month by Coroner Pierce in various sections of the county.

THE SUPERIOR COURT

A number of important matters were on the calendars in both departments of the Superior Court on Monday, and rulings were made in many instances by Judges Dougherty and Burnett.

The proceedings in several divorce suits in which the parties are more or less prominent in this county, were continued and set for trial.

In department one a sale of real estate was ordered in the estate of William F. Mallory.

The will of the late Almon T. Johnson was admitted to probate, and Mary Ann Johnson was appointed executrix of the same.

The final account was settled and distribution was ordered of the estate of Miss Annie D. Burnett.

The petition to set aside the estate was granted in the matter of the estate of Albert L. Seeley.

The final account of the estate of Michael Walsh was settled. The matter of the estate of Zerah L. Buckner was continued to March 13th.

The motion to strike out was denied in the matter of the insolvency proceedings of Dan Behmer. The seperate demurrer was overruled and ten days given to answer.

The suit of Lizzie Sullivan against Geo. Sullivan was submitted and taken under advisement.

These civil matters were continued: Robert E. Wilde against Ivy P Leach et al., in re estate of Jean B. Barbarin and Martin Garcia et al., vs. Con Shea et al., all to March 13th.

Peter Torliatt was arraigned in department two on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. His plea was set for March 13th.

The case of the People of the State of California vs. W. W. Chapman was continued to March 13th, to be then set for trial.

The suit of Mary F. Silvey against Dr. George Ivancovich was submitted and taken under advisement.

The trial of the action of Parqualli Balsi against Luigi Castagnacio was set for March 21st.

The demurrer in the action for divorce brought by Charles Linebaugh against Lillian Linebaugh was overruled and ten days given to anwer.

The hearing of the demurrer in the divorce proceedings of Ella B. Brown against John McA. Brown was continued to March 13th.

A motion for change of venue to Santa Clara county was granted in the action of Peterson Brothers against the Mineral King Fruit company.

The motion to dismiss was denied and a stay of execution of ten days was granted in the suit of the Petaluma Paving company against James Singley et al.

Danger Signals!

Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest?

Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself?

If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?"

Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.

Scott's Emulsion

prevents consumption and hosts of other diseases which attack the weak and those with poor blood.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is the one standard remedy for inflamed throats and lungs, for colds, bronchitis and consumption. It is a food medicine of remarkable power. A food, because it nourishes the body; and a medicine, because it corrects diseased conditions.

Altogether nine men were killed and wounded in the engagement.

DID NOT SELL LIQUOR TO INDIANS

Prosecution Fails to Make Out a Case Against

L. Quartaroli and He is Discharged from Custody.

L. Quartaroli, the well-known hotel keeper of this place, was arrested by officer Ohm last Monday and charged with selling liquor to Indians.

He was taken before Judge Cheney by the arresting officer and was released on filing a bail bond of $1000 with V. Bulotti, W. A. Weaver and Chas. Dalpogetto as sureties.

On Wednesday his preliminary examination took place before Judge Cheney. Mr. Quartaroli was defended by Hon. Emmet Seawell while District Attorney Webber conducted the prosecution.

The complaint charged the defendant with selling wine to Jos. Molina and Gabriel Sears, alleged in the complaint to be Indians. During the course of the examination Mr. Seawell brought out the fact that both men were of mongrel breed — being Spanish-Chileans. District Attorney Webber for the people instructed the Court that if he was satisfied from the testimony that the men were not Indians he should discharge the defendant, as in that case no crime had been committed. The Judge thereupon discharged Mr. Quartaroli, who was congratulated on all sides by his many friends present.

As to whether or not he sold the men wine did not cut any figure in the examination. Mr. Quartaroli, however, denies the imputation and claims that his arrest was a put up job.

The ending of this case has given general satisfaction to our people, as during a residence of eighteen or twenty years in this place Mr. Quartaroli, who has never been in any trouble before, has been considered one of Sonoma's enterprising and law-abiding citizens.

JOSE MOLINA.

Held to Answer for Assault With a Deadly Weapon.

Jose Molina, the half-breed, who stabbed Gabriel Sears, a noble red man of the forest, near the iron bridge, on Sunday of last week, had his preliminary examination before Judge Cheney on Wednesday last After the testimony was all in his Honor held Molina to appear before the Superior Court to answer to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Bail was set at $1000 and not being able to secure bondsmen the offender was taken to Santa Rosa by Deputy Sheriff Tombs and incarcerated in the County Jail pending his trial.

It transpired after Constable Ohm had arrested and jailed Molina in Santa Rosa last week that he was wanted in that city on a charge of battery.

Last September, Molina, who was known in Santa Rosa as Jos. Miller, while riding a bicycle collided with a Chinese who was also mounted on a wheel. A scrap followed in which the Chinaman was worsted and he swore out a warrant for Molina's arrest, who had made good his escape. Should Molina escape State Prison on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon he will be sentenced on the latter charge, to which he plead guilty before Judge Brown before being brought back to this place and committed to answer the more serious offense.

Fine Monument.

Mrs. Elizabeth Marti of this place has purchased from A. H. Blackburn of Petaluma a fine granite monument, which will be erected in Mountain Cemetery over the grave of her late husband, M. Marti.

Still More Counterfeiting.

The Secret Service has just uncarthed another band of counterfeiters in a suburb of New York City, and secured a large quantity of bogus $5 bills, which are so cleverly executed that the average person would never suspect them of being spurious. Things of great value are always selected by counterfeiters for imitation, notably the celebrated Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators but no equals for common disorders like fever, agua, malaria, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and general debility. The bitters set things right in the stomach and when the stomach is in good working order it makes good blood and plenty of it. In this manner the Bitters get at the seat of strength and vitality, and restore vigor to the weak and debilitated. Beware of counterfeiters when buying. Always go to the reliable druggists who have the reputation of giving what you ask for.

EXCITING BASE BALL GAME.

Sonoma vs. Glen Ellen—The Latter Defeated by a Score of 42 to 17.

An exciting base ball game was played last Sunday afternoon in Glen Ellen Park between the Sonoma Base Ball Club and the Merchants Nine of Glen Ellen. The batting and fielding of the Sonoma boys were too much for the Glen Ellen's who were defeated by a score of 42 to 17. L. H. Green of this place was scorer. Capt. J. White umpired for the Glen Ellenites and Billy Meyers acted in the same capacity for the Sonoma boys.

The game, which lasted three hours, was witnessed by a large crowd of people from the surrounding county.

The pitching of Theodore Kiser of the Sonoma nine won the admiration of the spectators, as did also the catching of three fly balls in the left field by Jep Valente. Wm. Glynn, Jas. Landy, Tom Fields, Harry Knight, Geo. McGill, Tony Kiser and Bert Jones did creditable work at their respective positions on the diamond.

Messrs C. Beggs, Hardman and A. McCord of the Glen Ellen team also did good work.

Following is the line up of both teams:

SONOMA	POSITION	GLEN ELLEN
Fields	Catcher	McCord
Knight	Pitcher	Beggs
McGill	1st Base	McCord
Kiser	2nd Base	Harman
Landy	3rd Base	Hardman
Glynn	Short Stop	N rris
Kiser	Right Field	Babe Kirk
Jones	Center Field	Nichols
Valente	Left Field	Murphy

Following is the score by innings.

Too Much Booze.

Gus Anderson, a farmer residing on his mountain ranch several miles northeast of town, went on a booze last Wednesday, and, while attempting to navigate our streets with three sheets to the wind, capsized on Duhring's corner and striking the cement sidewalk with prow on, badly mulitated his figurehead. He was picked up and assisted into his wagon and essayed to make his way to his home behind his faithful span of "mewels," but had proceeded but a short distance when he took a header out of his wagon, one of the wheels of which passed over his left leg. He was also considerably cut and bruised about the head. Marshal Robin then took the intoxicated man in charge and placed him in the lockup. A surgeon was sent for and examined Anderson and as his injuries were only slight he was left in the cooler over night to sleep off his jag.

Poor Prospects for the Trout Fisherman.

The open season for trout is now near at hand—that is to say, April 1st. The prospects for the local fisherman securing a mess of the speckled beauties in the small mountain streams will be mighty poor, however, if there is not an abundance of rain between now and the 1st of April. So far this season there has not been sufficient rainfall to keep the mountain streams running for over a few days at a time and in consequence the trout have had no opportunity to ascend in any considerable number the fifteen or twenty small streams which empty into Sonoma creek. The same thing happened last season and little or no trout were caught in any of the streams if we except Sonoma creek. Late spring rains, however, if they are copious enough to set these mountain streams a-booming will enable the trout to reach their spawning grounds by the thousands and will ensure the fisherman fine sport until late in the summer.

Handsome Home.

One of the handsome homes of the Sonoma Valley is that of Mrs. Elizabeth Marti of Schellville which has just been completed. It is supplied with all the modern conveniences of a model home and is an ornament to the southern part of the valley. Mrs. Marti is an enterprising woman and in addition to the above contemplates many more improvements on her farm.

SONOMA COUNTY HAPPENINGS.

W. W. Chapman, tried last week in the Superior Court of this county on a charge of falsifying the election returns in Wilson precinct, will have another trial. The jury disagreed, standing eight for acquittal and four for conviction.

Chas. Norman, Geo. Matthews and E. James, arrested in Cloverdale last week, charged with assaulting and beating Mrs. Hill near that place, had their preliminary examination on Friday night of last week and were discharged from custody on the grounds that the evidence did not sustain the allegations of the complaing witness.

Sheriff Grace has captured the half-breed Indian desperado, Jim Stevens, who murdered a fellow aborigine in Sebastopol on Sunday night of last week. The capture was effected on the Peterson ranch between Santa Rosa and Guerneville by Deputies Logan Tombs and Geo. Lewis last Saturday. The murderer had been at large nearly a week.

A singular accident occurred in Sebastopol the other day. The little daughter of Jas. McMenamin while walking about with a small tin horn in her mouth stumbled and fell. The mouthpiece of the horn became detached and lodged in the child's throat. Dr. Benepe in order to save the patient's life performed a very delicate surgical operation and removed the obstruction. It is thought the child will recover.

The other evening two men, one white and the other black, narrowly escaped being crushed to death beneath the wheels of a Donahue locomotive. They were driving west along Ninth street at a lively pace and were about to cross the railroad track at Mark Body's blacksmith shop when, at a signal from Mr. Body, they stopped just in time to avoid a collision with the southbound passenger train. The engine and the horses were in uncomfortably close proximity to each other when the latter were checked by his driver. Mr. Body declares that the men were so frightened that the white man turned black and the black man turned white.—Republican.

MOUNTAIN ROSE.

Cold and rough the north wind blows,
Black in the morning early.
Who should I meet but Mountain Rose
Among the stubble barley?

All the world is under snows.
Blowing 'tis and snowing.
Who should I meet but Mountain Rose
The way that I was going?

Not a leaf on the poplar tree,
Not a flower on the heather.
Mountain Rose looked shyly at me
As we stepped out together.

Mountain Rose, so airy and free,
Where are roses blowing?
Rose's cheek, half turned from me,
The rose of love was showing.

Black and cold the north wind blows.
Never a bird is singing.
There's a lilt in the voice of Rose
Sweet as the skylark ringing.

Winter's black on heather and broom,
Where shall I find honey?
Rose's mouth is the honeycomb
And Rose's laugh is bonny.

Black and cold the north wind blows,
Winter comes in fairly.
I keep summer with Mountain Rose
Among the stubble barley.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE VOLUNTEER.

The mother would not be pacified. "Not you," she said; "not you. 'The only son of his mother, and she was a widow'—remember that. War is not for you."

"The country calls," argued the young man. "Must I consider myself at such a time?"

The girl who was to be his wife spoke up.

"Yourself!" she said. "Is it only yourself?"

"You, too," he answered. "I fight for those I love when I fight for my country."

"What do you know of the hell and horror of war?" demanded his mother. "War made your father an invalid for life. Is not that enough for me to give my country? There are others who should go—rich men's sons bred in luxury, who should meet hardship for once in their lives—but you, with your meager pay, which barely provides for us!"

"My work is more than that," he frowned.

"Yes," she said, "you should make it more; there will be your wife to provide for."

"If you love me"— began the girl, when she broke down, burying her face in her hands.

"If you would only understand," he pleaded. "You know how it is—our countrymen murdered, the flag insulted, men going to the front. Must I stay here grinding out a daily existence in work that gives me mere food and shelter while those brave fellows stake their lives for me?"

"And what will become of you," cried his mother, "if you should return after the fighting is over? The position you have is mean, but it is something. Will it be held for you till the war is ended? I have seen war, and I know what comes afterward—struggle, poverty, inability to earn daily bread."

"I love you," said the girl, "but how can you tell that I may not forget you for some one else, when you can so easily leave me?"

"If I thought," returned he, "that you could be false to me"—

"Not that," she interrupted. "But a woman gives trust for trust; she cannot wholly obliterate herself when she finds that she is held unworthy. For am I not held unworthy when you can leave me against my wishes?"

His mother caught up the word. "A worthy son does not forget his mother in her hour of need. You are all I have."

He looked about him. He saw the peace at home, the sun shining in at the window, the peace outside of field and brook and wood; he heard the distant low of cattle, the peaceful song of mated birds. "Then," he sighed, "you would rather I should be a coward?"

"The brave man," said the girl, drying her eyes, "is he who stands behind the woman who loves him." She smiled up at him. "Stay with us. You are no less a soldier in being our commander." She placed her arms about him, drawing him to her.

His mother came and stood beside him. "Stay with us," she echoed.

"Listen!"

It was a new voice that spoke. The words came from a small, cramped form crouching beside the stove in the corner. It was the old grandmother. More than fourscore years had bowed her head. They had not thought that she understood. Her blind eyes were filmy. There was a smile upon her shriveled lips and one shaking hand was raised above her head.

"Listen!"

From afar off came a sound that was other than that of lowing kine and song of birds.

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!"

The young man straightened.

The old grandmother rose to her feet. She swayed a little and caught at the wall. She groped about the room to a tall chest of drawers. From it she took a long, narrow package.

"My son," she said, with feeble voice, "was shot in war and died from the effects of his wounds years after. It was an honorable death. While he was fighting I picked lint. I tore up all my linen to make it; then I went to the front and nursed the wounded. My husband was a midshipmate in 1812. A cutlass severed the sinews of his arm. I was a girl when I met him, and his helpless arm made me love him. Listen!"

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!" The sound was a little nearer.

"My grandfather," quavered the old grandmother, "was at Valley Forge. He was made prisoner. It was winter. His mother went to see him, carrying a basket of food. The journey was many miles. Sometimes a farmer let her ride a way in his cart. The rest of the way she walked through the snow. When she reached the prison, the guards took her basket from her and divided the contents. They would not let her see her son. She ran past the soldiers up to the prison door. 'Child,' she called, 'kiss the keyhole on your side! I will kiss it on mine. Bear up! Be brave! God bless you! Your mother prays for you and thinks of you with a smile on her lips and not a tear in her eye.'" As she spoke the old woman tore the wrappings from the package she held and disclosed a dim blade. "It was my grandfather's!" she thrilled.

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!" came the sound and nearer yet. "Drum—drum—der-um, drum, drum!"

"Mother!" gasped the young man.

The old grandmother stood in the middle of the room almost erect. A tinge of color was in her cheek and made her seem almost young. She held out the sword.

"Your country," she said, "and your God!"

"The God of peace!" the young girl whispered.

"The God of honorable war!" cried the old grandmother. The young man turned to the girl.

"My son!" His mother spoke. Her eyes were kindled. "I, too, can nurse the wounded."

"And I can at least pick lint," the girl said.

The old grandmother turned her sightless eyes toward them. "There must be no cowards in my family," she said. "Love knows no cowardice; affection has its pride in bravery. Remember Valley Forge! Remember 1812! Remember your father! Listen!"

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!" The recruits were marching through the village street.

"Mother!" cried the young man. "My love!"

"Go!" said his mother.

"Go!" sobbed the girl he loved.

He bent over and kissed the girl, then his mother and turned to the old grandmother.

"The sword—kiss the sword," she said, "and go and do your duty."

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!"

Flags were flying; crowds were following the recruits. Into the dust and swirl rushed the youth. His hat was off; the sun threw its beams on his curling, fair hair. They in the doorway saw that.

He looked back at his mother, with her arm about the girl he loved, waving her handkerchief to him, though he knew her eyes were streaming. And back of all he saw the old dim sword held up by the blind grandmother.

"Drum — drum — der-um, drum, drum!" And onward he went to do battle for his country and his flag.—Robert C. V. Meyers in Every Month.

Kirghiz Music.

One of the Kirghiz came into my tent, and, squatting down, began to play the kaumuss, a three stringed instrument played with the fingers. The music was monotonous and of a melancholy cadence, but it harmonized well with the surroundings and the moods they inspired. In a word, it was typically Asiatic. I sat and listened to it with pleasure, giving my imagination captive to the music, the soft moaning of the night wind, the gentle crackle of the fire. How many and many a night did I not spend thus during the long years that followed listening to the dreamy sounds of that primitive Kirghiz instrument!

How many a dark, solitary winter afternoon did I not while away in this foolish fashion! In course of time I grew accustomed to the kaumuss and derived as much pleasure from it as the Kirghiz did themselves. In fact, I grew fond of it. Its soothing music carried my mind away into the fairy realms of day dreams. My thoughts flew far away to my home amid the dark pine woods of Sweden.—Sven Hedin in "Through Asia."

The Flying Fox.

The flying fox is a very curious inhabitant of the forest near Moreton bay, in east Australia. It lives in flocks and moves generally toward the dusk of the evening, and the noise produced by the heavy flapping of the so called wings is very singular. The flocks like quiet places, where there are large araucarian pine trees, with an underwood of scrub and creepers. The foxes hang in vast numbers from horizontal branches of the pine trees.

When there is a clear space among the trees, an enormous number of the animals may be seen, and their noise can be heard, for directly they see anything unusual they utter a short bark, something like the sound made by young rooks. Often every branch is crowded, and the young foxes are seen either flapping their wings and holding on with their hind feet and with their heads downward or snarling and fighting for places.

Suddenly the whole take to flight and flap their furry, winglike sides and wheel around like heavy birds. Many fly with their young holding on to them.

The creature is not a true fox, and there is a fold of skin which reaches from the fore to the hind legs. This is called the wing, and it enables the pteropus, as the animal is called, to float and turn in the air.—Philadelphia Press.
